To the User

All languages have phrases or sentences that cannot be understood literally. Even if you know the meaning of all the words in a phrase and understand all the grammar of the phrase completely, the meaning of the phrase may still be confusing. Many proverbs, informal phrases, and common sayings offer this kind of problem. A phrase or sentence of this type is said to be idiomatic. This dictionary is a collection of the idiomatic phrases and sentences that occur frequently in American English. The third edition contains more than one thousand idiomatic expressions not listed in the second edition and a number of new features that provide additional convenience and simplicity.

Using the Dictionary

1. Start by looking up the complete phrase that you are seeking in the dictionary. Each expression is alphabetized under the first word of the phrase, except the words a, an, and the. After the first word, entry heads are alphabetized letter by letter. For example, in so many words will be found in the section dealing with the letter i. Entry phrases are never inverted or reordered like so many words, in; words, in so many; or many words, in so. Initial articles—a, an, and the—are not alphabetized and appear in a different typeface in the entry. In the entry heads, the words someone or one stand for persons, and something stands for things. These and other generic expressions appear in a different typeface.

2. If you do not find the phrase you want, or if you cannot decide exactly what the phrase is, look up any major word in the phrase in the Phrase-Finder Index, which begins on page 447. There you will find all the phrases that contain the key word you have looked up. Pick out the phrase you want and look it up in the dictionary.

3. An entry head may have one or more alternate forms. The entry head and its alternates are printed in boldface type, and the alternate forms are preceded by “AND.” Two or more alternate forms are separated by a semicolon (;).

4. Many of the entry phrases have more than one major sense. These senses are numbered with boldface numerals.
5. Individual numbered senses may have additional forms that appear in boldface type, in which case the AND and the additional form(s) follow the numeral.

6. The boldface entry head (together with any alternate forms) is usually followed by a definition or explanation. Explanations are enclosed in angle brackets (< and >), and explain or describe the entry head rather than define it. Definitions take the form of words, phrases, or sentences that are semantic equivalents of the entry head. Alternate definitions and restatements of the definitions are separated by a semicolon (;). These additional definitions are usually given to show slight differences in meaning or interpretation. Sometimes an alternate definition is given when the vocabulary of the first definition is difficult.

7. Some entries include instructions to look up some other phrase. For example:

   scarcer than hen’s teeth Go to (as) scarce as hen’s teeth.

8. A definition or explanation may be followed by comments in parentheses. These comments tell about some of the variations of the phrase, explain what it refers to, give other useful information, or indicate cross-referencing.

9. Some definitions are preceded by additional information in square brackets. This information makes the definition clearer by supplying information about the typical grammatical context in which the phrase is found.

10. Sometimes the numbered senses refer only to people or things, but not both, even though the entry head indicates both someone or something. In such cases, the numeral is followed by “[with someone]” or “[with something].”

11. Examples are introduced by a ☐ or a ☒ and are in italic type. The ☐ introduces an example containing two elements that have been transposed, such as a particle and the object of a verb. This is typically found with phrasal verbs.

12. Some entry heads stand for two or more idiomatic expressions. Parentheses are used to show which parts of the phrase may or may not be present. For example: (all) set to do something stands for all set to do something and set to do something.
Terms and Symbols

[...:] enclose a partial entry that is followed by an instruction about where to find the whole entry or a comment. For instance, [heart stands still] Go to one’s heart stands still.

<.....> enclose a description of or explanation about an entry head rather than a definition. For instance, Finders keepers(, losers weepers).

□ (a box) marks the beginning of an example.

◨ (a box containing a “T”) marks the beginning of an example in which two elements of the phrase, usually a particle and an object, are transposed.

and indicates that an entry head has variant forms that are the same or similar in meaning as the entry head. One or more variant forms are preceded by and.

entry block is the body of an entry starting with a boldface word or phrase type and running to the next boldface word or phrase.

text head is the first phrase or word, in boldface type, of an entry block; the phrase or word that the definition explains.

go to means to turn to the entry head indicated.

see also means to consult the entry head indicated for additional information or to find expressions similar in form or meaning to the entry head containing the see also instruction.

Type Styles

Entry heads are printed in boldface type, e.g., Join the club!

Variable parts of an entry are printed in condensed type, e.g., just the same (to someone).

Entry heads being referred to as cross-references are printed in sans serif type, e.g., get the short end of the stick.

Variable parts of cross-references are printed in light condensed type, e.g., ease off (on someone or something).
Words or phrases that are mentioned but are not entries are printed in italic type, e.g., (Preceded by be or seem).

Examples are printed in italic type, e.g., □ The cashier was not allowed to leave the bank until the manager balanced the books.

Definitions, descriptions, and comments are printed in roman type, e.g., a very active and energetic person who always succeeds.

Words or phrases being emphasized in examples are printed in roman type, e.g., □ And stop hiding your head in the sand. All of us will die somehow, whether we smoke or not.

The articles a, an, and the appear in roman type at the beginning of an entry head, and these words are ignored in the process of alphabetizing, e.g., a babe in the woods, which is found under B, not under T.
About This Dictionary

NTC’s American Idioms Dictionary is designed for easy use by lifelong speakers of English, as well as the new-to-English speaker or learner. The dictionary uses 14,000 examples to illustrate the meanings of approximately 8,500 idiomatic forms in 7,500 entry blocks. An appendix includes 500 irreversible binomial and trinomial phrases. The dictionary contains a unique Phrase-Finder Index that allows the user to identify and look up any expression in the dictionary from a single key word.

This is a dictionary of form and meaning. It focuses on the user’s need to know the meaning, usage, and appropriate contexts for each idiomatic phrase. Specialized knowledge of English lexical and sentential semantics and English grammar is not used in indexing, defining, or explaining the idiomatic expressions.

English is a highly variable language. American English has differences that correlate with geographical location, the level and register of use, and other differences that relate to characteristics of the speaker. To include examples that would represent all kinds of American English as spoken by all kinds of speakers is not possible. The kind of American English used in the dictionary is generally what one would expect to hear used by educated, polite individuals representative of the traditional American home, family, and community. It is widely used in the United States and understood by English speakers throughout the country.

Idioms or idiomatic expressions are often defined as “set phrases” or “fixed phrases.” The number of idiomatic expressions that are totally invariant is really quite small, however, even when the English proverbs are included in this category. Most such phrases can vary the choice of noun or pronoun and most select from a wide variety of verb tense and aspect patterns. Adjectives and some adverbs can be added at will to idiomatic phrases. Furthermore, the new-to-English user is faced with the difficulty of isolating an idiomatic expression from the rest of the sentence and determining where to find it in a dictionary of idioms. If the user fails to extract the essential idiomatic expression, the likelihood of finding it in any dictionary is reduced considerably.
In dictionaries that list each idiomatic expression under a “key word,” there may be some difficulty in deciding what the “key word” is. In phrases such as on the button or in the cards, the key word, the only noun in the phrase, is easy to determine if one has correctly isolated the phrase from the sentence in which it was found. In phrases that have more than one noun, such as all hours of the day and night or A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, deciding on a “key word” may be more difficult. It is even more difficult when the only noun in the phrase is one of the variable words, such as with go around with her old friends, go around with Jim, and go around with no one at all, which are examples of go around with someone.

This dictionary uses the Phrase-Finder Index to get around the problems users face with trying to isolate the complete idiom and trying to predict its location in the dictionary. Simply look up any major word—noun, verb, adjective, or adverb—in the Phrase-Finder index, and you will find the form of the entry head that contains the definition you seek.

Another important feature for the learner is the use of object placeholders indicating human and nonhuman. Typical dictionary entries for idiomatic phrases—especially for phrasal verbs, prepositional verbs, and phrasal prepositional verbs—omit direct objects, as in put on hold, bail out, or see through. This dictionary uses the stand-in forms such as someone, something, some amount, or somewhere for variable objects and other variable forms. These stand-in forms are in condensed type.

All of that information is vital to learners of English, although it seems to come perfectly naturally to lifelong English speakers. For example, there is a big difference between put someone on hold and put something on hold, or between bail someone out and bail something out. There is also a great difference between see something through and see through something. These differences may never be revealed if the entry heads are just put on hold, bail out, and see through, with no object indicated.

Many idioms have optional parts. In fact, a phrase may seem opaque simply because it is really just an ellipsis of a longer, less opaque phrase. This dictionary shows as full a form of an idiom as possible with the frequently omitted parts in parentheses. For example: back down (from someone or something), be all eyes (and ears), and (every) once in a while.

The dictionary includes numerous irreversible binomials and trinomials—sequences of two or three words that are in a fixed order, such as fast and furious, but not furious and fast. These sequences are listed in the Appendix, beginning on page 621, and those that require explanation are cross-referenced to entries in the dictionary.

The compiler has included idiomatic phrases drawn from or suggested by Anne Bertram in NTC’s Dictionary of Proverbs and Clichés, NTC’s Dictionary of Euphemisms, and NTC’s Dictionary of Folksy, Regional, and Rural Sayings and Elizabeth Kirkpatrick in NTC’s English Idioms Dictionary.

(all) for the best good in spite of the way it seems now; better than you think. I’m very sorry to hear of the death of your aunt. Perhaps it’s for the best. I didn’t get into the college I wanted, but I couldn’t afford it anyway. It’s probably all for the best.

all gone used up; finished; over with. Oh, the strawberry jelly is all gone. We used to have wonderful parties, but those days are all gone.

all in tired; exhausted; all tuckered out. I just walked all the way from town. I’m all in. “What a day!” said Sally. “I’m all in.”

all in a day’s work part of what is expected; typical or normal. I don’t particularly like to cook, but it’s all in a day’s work. Putting up with rude customers isn’t pleasant, but it’s all in a day’s work. Cleaning up after other people is all in a day’s work for a chambermaid.

all in all considering everything that has happened; in summary and in spite of any unpleasantness. All in all, it was a very good party. All in all, I’m glad that I visited New York City.
all in good time at some future time; soon. (This phrase is used to encourage people to be patient and wait quietly.) When will the baby be born? All in good time. MARY: I’m starved! When will Bill get here with the pizza? TOM: All in good time, Mary, all in good time.

(all) in one breath spoken rapidly, usually while one is very excited. (Also literal.) Ann said all in one breath, “Hurry, quick! The parade is coming!” Jane was in a play, and she was so excited that she said her whole speech in one breath. Tom can say the alphabet all in one breath.

all in one piece safely; without damage. (Informal.) Her son come home from school all in one piece, even though he had been in a fight. The package was handled carelessly, but the vase inside arrived all in one piece.

(all) in the family restricted to one’s own family, as with private or embarrassing information. (Especially with keep.) Don’t tell anyone else. Please keep it all in the family. He only told his brother because he wanted it to remain in the family.

(all) joking aside and (all) kidding aside being serious for a moment; in all seriousness. I know I laugh at him but, joking aside, he’s a very clever scientist. I know I threatened to leave and go round the world, but, joking aside, I need a vacation.

(all) kidding aside Go to (all) joking aside.

all kinds of someone or something a great number of people or things; a great amount of something, especially money. (Informal. Also literal, meaning “all types.”) There were all kinds of people there, probably thousands. The Smith family has all kinds of money.

all manner of someone or something all types of people or things. We saw all manner of people there. They came from every country in the world. They were selling all manner of things in the country store.

all night long throughout the whole night. I couldn’t sleep all night long. John was sick all night long.

all of a sudden suddenly. All of a sudden, lightning struck the tree we were sitting under. I felt a sharp pain in my side all of a sudden.

all or nothing 1. everything or nothing at all. Sally would not accept only part of the money. She wanted all or nothing. I can’t bargain over truffles. I will have to have all or nothing. 2. time to choose to do something or not to do it. It was all or nothing. Tim had to jump off the truck or risk drowning when the truck went into the water. coach. Each of us was afraid to go alone, so we went in a body.

go in for something to take part in something; to enjoy (doing) something. John doesn't go in for sports. None of them seems to go in for swimming.

go in one ear and out the other [for something] to be heard and then forgotten. Everything I say to you seems to go in one ear and out the other. Why don't you pay attention?

go into action and swing into action to start doing something. I usually get to work at 7:45, and I go into action at 8:00. When the ball is hit in my direction, you should see me swing into action.

go into a nosedive and take a nosedive 1. [for an airplane] suddenly to dive toward the ground, nose first. It was a bad day for flying, and I was afraid we'd go into a nosedive. The small plane took a nosedive. The pilot was able to bring it out at the last minute, so the plane didn't crash. 2. to go into a rapid emotional or financial decline, or a decline in health. Our profits took a nosedive last year. After he broke his hip, Mr. Brown's health went into a nosedive, and he never recovered.

go into a tailspin 1. [for an airplane] to lose control and spin to the earth, nose first. The plane shook and then suddenly went into a tailspin. The pilot was not able to bring the plane out of the tailspin, and it crashed into the sea. 2. [for someone] to become disoriented or panicked; [for someone's life] to fall apart. Although John was a great success, his life went into a tailspin. It took him a year to get straightened out. After her father died, Mary's world fell apart, and she went into a tailspin.

go into detail to give all the details; to present and discuss the details. The clerk went into detail about the product with the customer. I just want a simple answer. Don’t go into detail.

go into effect and take effect [for a law or a rule] to become effective; to start to function. When does this new law go into effect? The new tax laws won't go into effect until next year. This law takes effect almost immediately.

go into hiding to conceal oneself in a hidden place for a period of time. The political dissident went into hiding. After robbing the bank, the bandits went into hiding for months.

go into hock go into debt. We will have to go into hock to buy a house. I go further into hock every time I use my credit card.

go into one's song and dance (about something) to start giving one's explanations and excuses about something. (One's can be replaced by the same old.) Please don't go into your song and dance about how you always tried to do what was right. John went into his song and dance about how he won the war all by himself. He always goes into the same old song and dance every time he makes a mistake.

go into orbit to get very excited; to be in ecstasy. When I got a letter from my boyfriend in England, I almost went into orbit. Tom goes into orbit every time the football team scores.

go into something to start something new. (Especially a new career, project, product line, etc. Compare this with be into something.) I may quit selling and go into management. We are shifting production away from glass bottles, and we are going into vases and other decorative containers. After she graduated, she went into law.

He insulted me publicly. You don’t expect me to take that lying down, do you? I’m not the kind of person who’ll take something like that lying down.

to accept or believe something on the basis of little or no evidence Please try to believe what I’m telling you. Just take it on faith. Surely you can’t expect me to take a story like that on faith.

take something on the chin to experience and endure a direct (figurative or literal) blow or assault. The bad news was a real shock, but John took it on the chin. The worst luck comes my way, and I always end up taking it on the chin.

take something out on someone or something to direct (or redirect) one’s anger or fear onto someone or something

I don’t care if you’re mad at your brother. Don’t take it out on me! John took his anger out on the wall by kicking it.

take something personally to interpret a remark as if it were mean or critical about oneself. Don’t take it personally, but you really need a haircut. I want to tell you something, but please don’t take it personally.

take something the wrong way

Go to take something amiss.

take something to heart to take something very seriously. John took the criticism to heart and made an honest effort to improve. I know Bob said a lot of cruel things to you, but he was angry. You shouldn’t take those things to heart.

take something up

1. to begin to deal with an issue. That’s too big a job for today. I’ll take it up tomorrow. Now we’ll take up the task of the election of officers.

2. to make the bottom of a skirt or pants cuffs higher off the floor. I’ll have to take this skirt up. It’s too long for me. Please take up my pants cuffs. They are an inch too long.

take something with a grain of salt to listen to a story or an explanation with considerable doubt

You must take anything she says with a grain of salt. She doesn’t always tell the truth. They took my explanation with a pinch of salt. I was sure they didn’t believe me.

take steps (to prevent something) to do what is necessary to prevent something

I took steps to prevent John from learning what we were talking about. I have to keep John from knowing what I’ve been doing. I can prevent it if I take steps.

take stock (of something) to make an appraisal of resources and potentialities

I spent some time yesterday taking stock of my good and bad qualities. We all need to take stock now and then.

take the bit between the teeth

Go to take the bit in one’s teeth.

take the bit in one’s teeth and take the bit between the teeth to put oneself in charge

Someone needed to direct the project, so I took the bit in my teeth. If you want to get something done, you’ve got to take the bit between your teeth and get to work.

take the bitter with the sweet to accept the bad things along with the good things. We all have disappointments. You have to learn to take the bitter with the sweet. There are good days and bad days, but every day you take the bitter with the sweet. That’s life.

take the bull by the horns and seize the bull by the horns to meet a challenge directly. If we are going to solve this problem, someone is going to have to take the bull by the horns. This threat isn’t going to go away by itself. We are going to seize the bull by the horns and settle this matter once and for all.

take the cake to win the prize; to be the best or the worst. Look at those fireworks. If they don’t take the cake, I don’t know what does. Tom really messed it up. What he did really takes the cake.

take the day off to choose not to go to work for one day. The sun was shining, and it was warm, so I took the day off and went fishing. Jane wasn’t feeling well, so she took the day off.

take the edge off to remove the essence, power, or “bite” of something. I had to tell her some very sad things, so I spoke slowly and softly to take the edge off the news. I put sugar in my coffee to take the edge off.

take the initiative to activate oneself to do something even if one has not been asked to do it. The door hinges squeak because no one will take the initiative to oil them. Sometimes, in order to get things done, you have to take the initiative.

take the law into one’s own hands to attempt to administer the law; to act as a judge and jury for someone who has done something wrong. Citizens don’t have the right to take the law into their own hands. The shopkeeper took the law into his own hands when he tried to arrest the thief.

take the liberty of doing something to assume the right to do something. Since I knew you were arriving late, I took the liberty of securing a hotel room for you. May I take the liberty of addressing you by your first name?

take the rap (for someone or something) 1. [with someone] to take the blame (for something) for someone else. (Slang, especially criminal slang.) John robbed the bank, but Tom took the rap for him. 2. [with something] to take the blame for (doing) something. (Slang, especially criminal slang.) I won’t take the rap for the crime. I wasn’t even in town. Who'll take the rap for it? Who did it?

take the trouble to make an effort to do something (that one might not otherwise do). I wish I had taken the trouble to study this matter more carefully. I just didn’t have enough time to take the trouble.

take the wind out of someone’s sails to challenge someone’s boasting or arrogance. (Informal.) John was bragging about how much money he earned until he learned that most of us make more. That took the wind out of his sails. Learning that one has been totally wrong about something can really take the wind out of one’s sails.
take the words out of one’s mouth [for someone else] to say what you were going to say. (Informal. Also with right, as in the example.) John said exactly what I was going to say. He took the words out of my mouth. I agree with you, and I wanted to say the same thing. You took the words right out of my mouth.

take time off not to work for a period of time—a few minutes or a longer period. (Compare this with get time off.) I had to take time off to go to the dentist. Mary took time off to have a cup of coffee.

take too much on to undertake to do too much work or too many tasks. Don’t take too much on, or you won’t be able to do any of it well. Ann tends to take on too much and get exhausted.

take to one’s heels to run away. The little boy said hello and then took to his heels. The man took to his heels to try to get to the bus stop before the bus left.

take to someone or something to become fond of or attracted to someone or something. (Informal.) Mary didn’t take to her new job, and she quit after two weeks. Mary seemed to take to John right away.

take turns ((at) doing something) to do something, one (person) at a time (rather than everyone all at once). Please take turns at reading the book. Everyone is taking turns looking at the picture. It’s more orderly when everyone takes turns.

take umbrage at something to feel that one has been insulted by something. The employee took umbrage at not getting a raise. Mary took umbrage at the suggestion that she was being unreasonable.

take up one’s abode somewhere to settle down and live somewhere. (Formal.) I took up my abode downtown near my office. We decided to take up our abode in a warmer climate.

take up room Go to take up space.

take up someone’s time to require too much of someone else’s time; to waste someone’s time. (Also with so much of or too much of, as in the examples below.) You’re taking up my time. Please go away. I’m sorry. I didn’t mean to take up too much of your time. This problem is taking up too much of my time.

take up space and take up room to fill or occupy space. (Note the variation in the examples.) The piano is taking up too much room in our living room. John, you’re not being any help at all. You’re just taking up space.

take up time to require or fill time. (Note the variation in the examples. Also without up.) This project is taking up too much time. This kind of thing always takes up time.

take up where one left off to start up again in the very place that one has stopped. I had to leave the room for a minute, but when I got back, I took up where I left off. It’s time to stop for lunch. After lunch, we will take up where we left off.

take up with someone to become a friend or companion to someone. Billy’s mother was afraid that he was taking up with the wrong kind of people. John and Bob took up with each other and became close friends.

taken aback surprised and confused. When Mary told me the news, I was taken aback for a moment. When I told my parents I was married, they were completely taken aback.

talk a blue streak to talk very much and very rapidly. (Informal.) Billy didn't talk until he was six, and then he started talking a blue streak. I can't understand anything Bob says. He talks a blue streak, and I can't follow his thinking.

talk back (to someone) to respond (to a rebuke) rudely or impertinently. John got in trouble for talking back to the teacher. A student never gains anything by talking back.

talk big to brag or boast; to talk in an intimidating manner. (Slang.) John is always talking big, but he hasn't really accomplished a lot in life. She talks big, but she's harmless.

talk down to someone to speak to someone in a patronizing manner; to speak to someone in the simplest way. The manager insulted everyone in the office by talking down to them. Please don't talk down to me. I can understand almost anything you have to say.

talk in circles to talk in a confusing or roundabout manner. I couldn't understand a thing he said. All he did was talk in circles. We argued for a long time and finally decided that we were talking in circles.

the talk of somewhere someone or something who is the subject of a conversation somewhere, especially the town. The handsome new teacher was the talk of the town. John's new car is the talk of the office.

talk oneself out to talk until one can talk no more. After nearly an hour, he had talked himself out. Then we began to ask questions. I talked myself out in the meeting, but no one would support my position.

talk shop to talk about business matters at a social event (where business talk is out of place). (Informal.) All right, everyone, we're not here to talk shop. Let's have a good time. Mary and Jane stood by the punch bowl, talking shop.

talk someone down 1. to win out over someone in an argument; to convince someone by arguing. She loves to argue. She takes pleasure in talking someone down. She tried to talk me down, but I held my ground. 2. to convince someone to lower the price. She wanted $2,000 for the car, but I talked her down. This is my final offer. Don't try to talk me down.

talk someone into (doing) something to overcome someone's objections to doing something; to convince someone to do something. They talked me into going to the meeting, even though I didn't really have the time. No one can talk me into doing something illegal.

talk someone or something up to promote or speak in support of someone or something. (Informal.) I've been talking up the party all day, trying to get people to come. The mayor is running for reelection, and everyone at city hall is talking her up.

talk someone out of (doing) something to convince someone not to do something. I tried to talk her out of going, but she insisted. Don't try to talk me out of quitting school. My mind is made up.

talk someone out of something to convince someone to give something up. This is my candy, and you can't talk me out of it. I tried to talk her out of her property, but she didn't want to sell.

talk someone's ear off Go to talk someone's head off.

talk someone's head off 1. [for someone] to speak too much. (Slang.) Why does John always talk his head off? Doesn't he know he bores people? She talks her head off and doesn't seem to know what she's saying. 2. and talk someone's ear off (Slang.) to talk to and bore someone. John is very friendly, but watch out or he'll talk your head off. My uncle always talked my ear off whenever I went to visit him.

talk something out to talk about all aspects of a problem or disagreement. Ann and Sally had a problem, so they agreed to talk it out. It's better to talk out a disagreement than to stay mad.

talk something over to discuss something. Come into my office so we can talk this over. □ We talked over the plans for nearly an hour.
